

Cookies Policy

This policy outlines the use of cookies used on <https://trialflare.com> and its subdomains (unless otherwise indicated) (the “Website”).

What are cookies?

Cookies are small text files which are transferred to your computer or mobile when you visit a website.

We use them to:

- Remember information about you, so you don't have to give it to us again.
- Keep you signed in.
- Help us understand how people are using our services, so we can make them better
- Help us personalise the Website to you by remembering your preferences and settings.

What cookies do we use?

We use the following types of cookies:

- First-party cookies: These cookies can only be sent from and received to the Website. We use these to identify you once you're logged-in, and they may be used by the Website in order to show that you're logged-in and to allow you to carry out the actions permitted by your user account. These cookies are strictly necessary in order for us to provide you with the services of the Website, and are not used to track you.
- Session cookies: These cookies get cleared when you finish your browsing session (e.g. by closing your tab or browser window). We sometimes use these to maintain settings for your account. These cookies are strictly necessary in order to provide you with the services of the Website, and are not used to track you.

We do not use cookies to track you, for marketing, or for advertising. Furthermore we do not use analytics services that might use such cookies to track you.

Turning off and on cookies

Since all of the cookies issued by the Website are strictly necessary (and are only placed on users' devices once logged-in), they cannot be turned on or off.

In general, your browser's controls will allow you to configure which types of cookies websites can place on your computer via your browser's preferences/settings window. Disabling cookies will help protect you from websites that try to track you, but may present you with a degradation of service.
